DUNEDIN INTERFAITH COUNCIL INVITATION TO A PEACE HIKOI ON OCTOBER 20TH.

To conclude the International Week of Prayer for World Peace (October 13th-20th) this year we have arranged an Interfaith Peace HikoI on the afternoon of Sunday 20th October. We will begin at 1.30pm at the Buddhist Centre (22 Royal Tce) where there is plenty of parking. We will then walk (and converse !) down to St Paul's Anglican Cathedral to arrive by 2.30pm, then on to the Jewish Synagogue arriving at around 3.30pm. We will be shown around each place by hosts from each faith community. We will conclude our day with afternoon tea together at the Synagogue. Please bring a small contribution towards afternoon tea. Rides will be available back to the Buddhist Centre, where there is plenty of parking on Royal Terrace. Our hope is that through walking together we will get to know each other better and that we will learn more about the places we visit from those who will host us.

We will provide a van for those who are unable to walk between the three venues. You are welcome to join us on the HikoI at any stage of our journey together. It would be helpful for us to know numbers, so please e mail dunedininterfaith@gmail.com before Sunday 20th October if you plan to attend. Further information can be obtained by e mailing the same address.

DUNEDIN BOOK LAUNCH FOR PEACE IS HER SONG

Presbyterian Research Centre (PRC) and Knox Church Dunedin are proud to present Anne Manchester in the local launching of her new book on the life and music of Shirley Murray, Peace is Her Song. This event will be held at 5:30 pm on Wednesday 16 October, at Knox Church Dunedin, preceded by refreshments and book-signing at 5 pm.

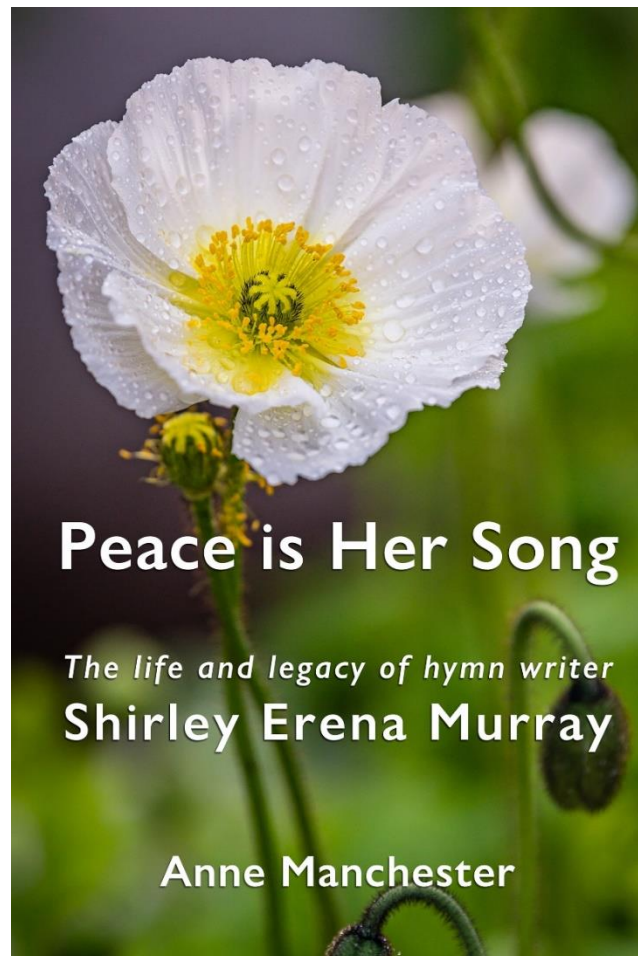

Journalist Anne Manchester began her career working on the Presbyterian and Methodist newspaper Crosslink, and later served as editor of the nursing journal Kai Tiaki Nursing New Zealand. She has published three books and edited others.

Hymnist Shirley Murray wrote more than 400 hymns during a career spanning four decades. Not only is she considered New Zealand's greatest hymn poet, her international reputation is equally significant, with her hymns appearing in more than 140 collections across denominations, countries and continents.

Peace was the theme she explored most, though issues around social justice, human rights, inclusivity within church and society, and ecology all feature strongly. Using economical and contemporary language, she moved the church away from a diet of hymns from past centuries and other countries to hymns that express a modern Aotearoa and southern hemisphere identity.

This new biography (338 pages, with two photo sections) covers Shirley's personal, intimate life story – her student years at the University of Otago, marriage to John Murray, motherhood, life in rural Taihape, and work as a researcher for the Labour Party in the 1980s. Her relationships with composers from New Zealand and around the world are also explored.

There is no admission charge for this programme, and the public are warmly welcomed to attend. For further information, contact Jay Robinson, PRC, 03 473 0775.
